Yutoku Inari Shrine

Nature and culture can be felt at the same time. The uniqueness of Japan can be felt through five senses such as eyes, ears and others. It is one of the three major Inari in Japan. It is based on red, and you can feel a different world as you pass through the Torii gates.

Tidal flats in Kashima

The aquarium is registered under the Ramsar Convention, and visitors can enjoy encounters with aquatic life that cannot be seen in famous aquariums. With the Gatalympics also being held, the tidal flats of Kashima are an exceptional place to enjoy the sunset. Without tidal flats, there would be no Kashima.

Inari yokan and Monzen Shopping Street

In Saga Prefecture, the most yokan-loving prefecture in Japan, Inari Yokan is the most popular yokan to eat and enjoy. The fun of pushing out and cutting yokan with strings enhances the joy of eating yokan. In the Monzen shopping street, many stores are lined up and the pace of walking naturally slows down. You can experience traditional shopping districts and enjoy Kashima's slow advancing time.

Japanese Sake

Sake, as the name implies, is a Japanese alcoholic beverage. Koji, or malted rice, is the most important ingredient in sake, and the longer it is stored, the more enjoyable the sake becomes. At this time, people would like to be able to enjoy waiting as much as enjoy storing the sake.

Wind bells at Inari

The white Inari is the symbol of Yutoku Inari. The sound of the wind chimes and Inari god smile make people stop and say their wishes. Visitors can also share the fun of making wishes into words

Pickles in Japan

The one thing that pushes us to do our best today at breakfast on the Japanese dining table is the pickles. Pickles is eaten with rice and washed down with miso soup. You may want to eat pickles for breakfast tomorrow. Pickles with a long history are exceptional and you can learn the importance of waiting in Japanese food by learning how to make them. Hope you will enjoy the taste that cannot be expressed in words.

Harmony in Inari

This is an unexpected scene at Inari. Here, you can enjoy the fusion of Japanese and Western culture with your eyes. The scene, which changes with each seasonal event, is something that makes your heart dance. This is a place to visit and enjoy with your eyes.
